How did you get here?

You're a forensics analyst. You've passed the written test. Now it's time for the practical exam. You have no idea what questions or scenarios you will be presented with but you feel you're ready for anything.

As you walk by one of the labs, you hear a commotion. Concerned, you enter. As you walk into the room, the door closes behind you and locks! You see a dead person lying on the floor. You rush over to him and feel for a pulse. Nothing. His body is cold. He is dead.

You are suddenly bowled over by an unknown assailant trying to make their way out. It happened too fast for you to get a look. As you fall, your head strikes the edge of the table. You're knocked unconscious.

When you awake, you only see darkness. No windows or lights.

You make your way to the door and turn the lights on and try to open the door. It's locked! The only way you can leave the lab now is by waiting until the morning when your co-workers come in.

In the room, you see a dead body and a bomb, with a timer set to 60 minutes. You walk over to it to examine it.

[Note on the body]

You pick up the phone and try to contact someone, however, you get no signal...
